Bio

Kate has extensive experience in employment-related immigration law, including inbound and outbound immigration; physician immigration; I-9 and immigration-related compliance training; and, assisting corporations with Department of Labor/Department of Homeland Security audits. Kate has also handled immigration matters involving criminal and inadmissibility issues; family-based immigration; and asylum proceedings and has expertise in the specialized area of physician immigration.

Kate is an Adjunct Professor at the University of Detroit Mercy, and a mentor through the American Immigration Lawyers Association, where she answers questions from new and seasoned attorneys from around the country. Kate provides pro bono support to military families through AILA, and also offers pro bono counsel through the Michigan Immigrant Rights Center and serves on the International Medical Graduate Taskforce, where she lobbies on behalf of physician-related immigration issues.

In 2012, she was named to the Michigan Super Lawyers' Rising Stars list. In 2016, Kate was selected as a "Michigan Super Lawyer" in immigration law. She was nominated as one of the "10 Best" Immigration Attorneys for Michigan by the American Institute of Legal Counsel, Immigration Division, in 2016. She was recognized by Crain's Detroit Business as one of their Notable Women Lawyers in Michigan for 2017.
